Projects WET, WILD, and LEARNING TREE are research-based and field-tested environmental education curricula designed for use by formal and informal educators. This training is specifically for educators working with younger (ages 3-9) youth and differs from the traditional Project WET, WILD, and LEARNING TREE trainings for older audiences. All three programs are interdisciplinary in nature and support Georgia school standards in a variety of subjects. After successful completion of this workshop, individuals will be certified educators and will receive guide books which are full of lessons, resources, and activities. Participants will also enjoy networking with other educators and professionals while engaging in hands-on learning.
